Aperitivo

What is “Aperitivo”?

This can be two things, usually we refer to an aperitivo as a style of drink, this can be a glass of prosecco or a spritz. Something that is light and refreshing, often this drink is also on the dry or sour side. It is a drink that is intended to stimulate your appetite.

An aperitivo can also refer to an activity, that usually takes place in the late afternoon or early evening and often involves both food and drinks. It is seen as a way to relax after work and get ready for a dinner later. An aperitivo in this case means a drink and something to nibble on.

In this section, we have created a few cocktail we like to recommend to have before or at the start of you meal.

If you would prefer a classic aperitivo, please ask a member staff.

Classico

What is a classic cocktail?

A classic cocktail is a mixed beverage that have survived past trends. It is a drink was popular before and is still popular today.

A classic cocktail is often made up of few ingredients, they might be nothing special by themselves, but mixed together, they create something seemingly wonderful.

Here we have created what we hope are to become new classic cocktails of the future.

If you would prefer a Classic cocktail, please ask a member staff.

Digestivo

What is “digestivo”?

A digestivo, is an alcoholic beverage that is normally consumed at the end of a meal. With the intent of helping to digest and possibly make space for more food.

A classic digestivo is usually a little alcoholic and often with a bitter or bittersweet element.

This can be either an amaro, maybe a spirit or a cocktail with those elements combined.

In this section we have created cocktails that we recommend you to have at end of you meal.

If you would like an amaro, see page 11.

If you would like a classic digestivo cocktail, please ask a member staff.
